

The man, the more he studies, the simpler he becomes, because as he studies, he discovers the greatness of his ignorance.

Aristotle
384 BC - 322 BC